

MEXICAN PRISON CAMP NOW ONLY CHARRED RUNS

It Disappears Simultaneously With Departure of Last of Federal Soldiers.

Burning bed straw, ruins of miniature adobe houses and a pall of black smoke is all that remains of the Mexican prison camp at Fort Bliss.

The last of the prison trains left Tuesday afternoon for Fort Wingate, N. M., under guard of the dough boys of the 20th Infantry and the most unique prison camp in the annals of the country was history. Four trains carried the remnants of the regular federal prisoners in command of Gen. Lopez and all of the volunteers in charge of Col. Lopez. The first train left at 9 o'clock and the last one soon after 1 o'clock. There were 2000 prisoners moved in these trains. They were guarded by companies E, F, G and H of the 20th Infantry, one company being assigned to each prison train.

Monday Moving Day.

All day Monday the prisoners were packing, being loaded on cars and guarded by the soldiers. The compound of barbed wire had been torn down and only the electric light poles with their black circles marking the outline of the old prison camp remained. Guards were posted on all sides of the camp and mounted infantrymen rode their beats as they have been doing since the camp was established. The camp was in ruins and all of the picturesqueness of the prison compound was gone.

Pay Tribute to Chaplain Austin.

VELASCO, ANGRY, MAY LEAD REVOLT AGAINST HUERTA

Federal Commander at Torreon Is Reported Incensed Over Lack of Support.

Veracruz, Mex., May 5.—Gen. Jose Refugio Velasco, the federal commander who was driven out of Torreon by Pancho Villa and his rebel army, has been reported to have been brought by the latest American report to arrive from the federal capital. They say Velasco is disgruntled, angry, and much distressed to find any longer for the federal government. Velasco is said to be discontented over the failure of the government in Mexico City to support him properly in the defense of Torreon and he is declared to have stated that he would never again lead a column of troops against the rebels.

No Need To Appeal For Ammunition.

The fall of Torreon and the subsequent disaster to the federal troops are ascribed by Gen. Velasco to have been due to the failure of the war department to lead his appeal for ammunition at a time when he said it was perfectly feasible for it to have reached him.

He asserted that there was much plotting among the federal army of Torreon, many of whom are declared to be dissatisfied at Gen. Huerta and his conduct of military affairs.

Two Generals Hiding Under Car.

Gen. J. J. Monte and Gen. J. J. Garcia Hidalgo, who were sent to the relief of Gen. Velasco at Torreon, are reported to have been found by Gen. Velasco hiding under freight cars during the heavy fighting at San Pedro de las Colonias after the fall of Torreon and to have been upbraided by him for cowardice. Another officer who reported that his station had been captured was killed by Gen. Huerta when he learned that the position had been abandoned without sufficient cause.

Another officer who was charged with cowardice in the face of the enemy, committed suicide, while Gen. Velasco was retreating.

Reached Saltillo With 1200.

In spite of his other difficulties, Gen. Velasco declared he could have won the battle at Torreon if the way department had not failed to keep him supplied with ammunition. Of the 6000 troops with which he started, he said, Velasco succeeded in reaching Saltillo with 1200.

Gen. Genave de La Cruz, the most important of Gen. Velasco's commanders, has, according to refugees, cast in his lot with Gen. Huerta.
